Community Corrections Treatment Programs

Short Term Intensive Residential Remedial Treatment (STIRRT)

STIRRT provides a 21 day intensive residential program combined with six months of aftercare services tailored to men with drug or alcohol dependence and legal issues. It is a highly structured setting for individuals who face imminent incarceration without treatment. The primary goal of STIRRT is the reduction of substance abuse and criminal behavior with the immediate objectives of increasing treatment and compliance with criminal justice supervision.

Intensive Residential Treatment (IRT)

IRT is a 90 day, intensive residential substance abuse treatment program. It has a gender-responsive, relationally based, and trauma informed approach developed exclusively for offenders. This treatment program, through a contract with DCJ, is designed to serve DOC transition, parole, direct sentence to Community Corrections, and probationers from the state of Colorado.

The Residential Dual Diagnosis Treatment (RDDT)

This program is intended for individuals presenting with serious substance abuse problems, chronic mental illness, and a history of felony criminal conduct. Adult felons with histories of substance abuse and mental illness are eligible for services from the RDDT program. This treatment is intended for clients who are transitioning to lower-intensity levels of care and/or are re-integrating into the community and whose history of criminal behavior, chronic substance use disorder, lack of functional and supportive living situation, levels of social or psychological dysfunction that necessitate residential treatment. Offenders accepted into the program must have been specifically assessed as appropriate for RDDT placement according to the Adult Standardized Offender Assessment (as revised) and mental health screens and assessments.

Alternatives to Incarceration for Individuals with Mental Health Needs (AIIM)

The purpose of the program is to provide an alternative to incarceration for individuals that are repeat offenders with mental health issues. The program provides intensive supervision and treatment to these offenders as well as monitored medications, substance testing, and intensive case management, assistance with basic needs, housing and employment. More information on Alternatives to Incarceration for Individuals with Mental health needs (AIIM) can be found at www.larmer.org/comcor/aiim.htm

8th Judicial District Wellness Court

This program’s mission is to reduce recidivism with persons with mental illness by supporting their long term recovery through collaborative efforts with community service providers, thereby providing public safety with cost effective alternatives to incarceration. Learn more about Wellness Court at www.larmer.org/comcor/aiim.htm
Victim Services

This program identifies and assists in meeting the needs of LCCC clients with past or current victimization issues. This program also coordinates services for victims of LCCC client offenses. Victim Services provides counseling, support, advocacy and referral for services. Support Groups are provided as needed.

Day Reporting Center (DRC)

This program provides day type reporting services to a wide variety of customers ranging from people who are not involved with the legal system to clients who are transitioning from prison and need close monitoring. DRC provides services such as drug and alcohol screening, medication monitoring, curfew checks or other services useful to a supervising agency. Clients may be directly sentenced to the Day Reporting Center but primarily receive services at the request of collateral agencies that contract with us.